THE HAGUE—The chief of operations in the Netherlands for the Soviet airline Aeroflot was released from jail yesterday, then ordered out of the country.

Vladimir A. Glukhov was arrested Wednesday on suspicion of espionage. The Hague public prosecutor declared that Glukhov was released because it would be difficult to prove he was a spy. But he said Dutch authorities had no doubt that he tried to obtain state secrets and had been well trained for the task.

An unidentified man had charged that Glukhov tried to obtain the secrets. When the Russian was arrested he tried to break out of the police car and witnesses said the detectives had to sit on him.
